Who We Are

The Society's purpose is to unite persons interested in Antarctica, facilitate friendly exchanges of scientific information and personal recollections, encourage increased appreciation of the global importance of Antarctica, and share enthusiasm for the southern continent.

The not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization was originally formed shortly after the International Geophysical Year (1957-58). Initially comprised largely of Antarctic scientists, its members now span generations, varied interests, and diverse experiences associated with the Antarctic.

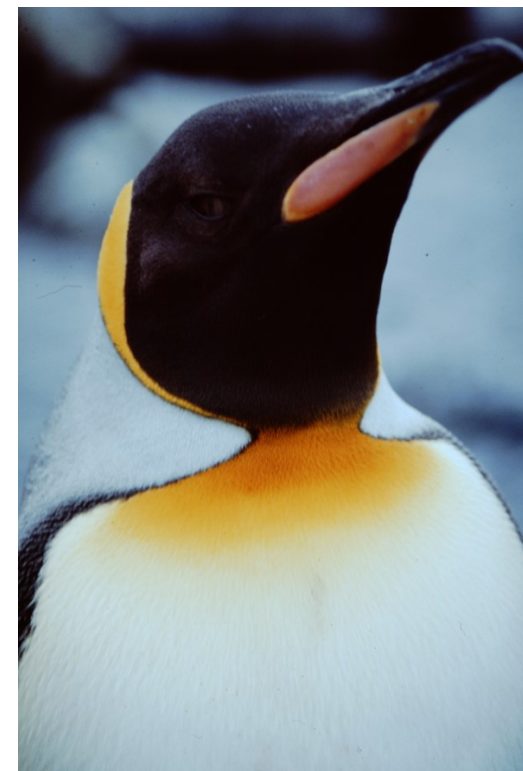

As our motto says, this is a Society "by and for all Antarcticans." That includes those who have had the good fortune to visit Antarctica as well as anyone else interested in any aspect of it. People have always been the focus of The Antarctic Society: scientists, explorers, support personnel, writers, artists, educators, enthusiasts, and travelers to the continent.

If you are an Antarctic - either by experience or interest - come join us! Please fill out and mail the application found in this brochure, contact us through our website at www.antarctican.org, or visit our facebook page www.facebook.com/antarcticansociety.

Antarctican Society Newsletters

Published quarterly, the newsletters contain contributions by well-known Antarcticans, news about research, national program updates, anecdotes, reviews of Antarctic art and literature, obituaries of important contributors to polar endeavors, and a wealth of personal history extending from the International Geophysical Year (IGY 1957-58), to the International Polar Year (IPY 2007-08), to the present. Archived newsletters provide additional resources, including a valuable source of information on members of the Byrd Antarctic Expeditions, thanks to Ruth Siple. Brief, focused, and enjoyable, the Society newsletters always entertain and inform!

Find this and more in videos and other first-hand documentation in the Antarctic Society's rich archives.

The Antarctic Society's membership has included such illustrious Antarcticans as Dr Charles Swwithinbank, perhaps the most experienced Antarcticans ever; Dr. Laurence Gould and Dr. Paul Siple, both of whom served under Admiral Richard E. Byrd in the various Byrd Antarctic Expeditions; Lieutenant Henry Worsley; and other well-known researchers, explorers, and writers. The current membership includes many veterans of the International Geophysical Year, Operation Deep Freeze, and stations such as McMurdo, Amundsen-Scott South Pole, Palmer, Siple, Byrd, Little America, Hallett, Eights, Plateau, Dome C, and more than a few non-American science bases. We also have members who are presently active in Antarctica, either in research, science support, art, literature, or the adventure-tourism industry. Those who would like to visit are among our ranks, too. The Antarctic Society is truly multi-faceted.

What We Do

The Antarctic Society has close ties to National Scientific Programs, research scientists, modern explorers, writers, artists, travelers and others. We unite for social and informational exchanges in person and virtually. The Society also provides:

- * Quarterly Newsletters
- * Periodic Gatherings for members
- * Opportunities for forums and lectures
- * Website and historic archives
- * Collections of articles, videos, memoirs, narratives, eulogies, letters, and philatelic examples
- * Book and art reviews
- * Free slide-scanning service for members
- * Members-only resources
- * Network of experienced and interested Antarctic people
- * Links to many associated Antarctic programs and groups
